

JUDGE ALEXANDER McMASTER Shows Improved Conditions in the State.

FEWER CASES ARE HANDLED

STATISTICS ON WORK OF OFFICERS ARE FURNISHED.

There were 45 fewer cases handled by the juvenile court of the Third district during the year just closed than in the previous year, as shown in the annual report of Judge Alexander McMaster and Guardello Brown, chief probation officer, submitted to the juvenile court commission yesterday. There were 1,386 cases handled during the year just closed in November, 1909, as compared with 1,431 in November, 1908, a decrease of 45 cases.

This is chiefly accounted for, according to Judge McMaster, through the fact that for several months the juvenile court was practically without a home, and because of the work of the juvenile court officers who have done much to change the course of boys and girls before they reach the court.

One of the most earnest pleas of Judge McMaster is for more money from the state with which to push the work against adults who contribute to the delinquency of the minors. It is pointed out that the justices of the peace and the courts have been unable to handle these cases, but that the work cannot be brought to its best effect until the juvenile court is able financially to take care of these cases.

The report of Judge McMaster does not suggest many changes in the present juvenile court system, but says that these will be made in a later report. The report of Judge McMaster follows in part:

Credit for Officers.

Particular praise is accorded C. R. Jones, chief probation officer of Summit county, and C. R. McBride of Tooele county, by Judge McMaster. He says the two officers have interested the teachers, ministers and others of the same of their county in the work and have accomplished wonders in the work among the girls and boys.

Chief Probation Officer Guardello Brown, submits a report showing the cases handled during the year, with a preface dealing with the juvenile court work for the year. The report shows the work for the year by Mr. Brown says: "There seems, however, to be some misunderstanding among parents regarding the juvenile court work. Instead of their co-operation with the officers in the correction of the wayward boys and girls, they often feel that the court is an institution designed to rob them of their children. The very opposite of this is the case, and the young offenders, it becomes necessary to first convert the parents to juvenile court work before we can accomplish our purpose."

"There is no doubt but we have the support of the better element of our community, and all we need is the cooperation of the parents to make the juvenile court a success."

"We feel, however, that about 55 per cent of the boys and girls among whom we have been working have changed their course in life and are now on the road to become good citizens."

More Boys Handled.

More boys have attracted the attention of the juvenile court during the year than under any other head, as shown by the tabulated statement of cases handled in court and out of court, making a total of 297 for the year. Petit larceny comes second with 155 cases, 4 of which were taken into court and 151 handled out of court. There were five cases brought to the attention of the court officials in which the boys and twelve cases were handled where the minors were 15 years old.

The majority of the cases among the boys start at about 11 years and continue until 16 or 17. The table shows a total of 123 boys brought before the court and handled by juvenile court officers during the year. There were not nearly so many truant as a year ago, only thirty-five were detained for this offense.

Under the several heads, the report shows the following: Incontinency, 37; malicious mischief, 28; visiting schools and pool rooms, 25; truancy, 20; truancy, 33; petit larceny, 155; assault and battery, 4; growing up in idleness, 1; crime, 17; smoking, 4; fighting, 10; dependent and neglected, 21; immoral conduct, 22; violating curfew ordinance, 3; violating bicycle ordinance, 20; abusive language, 3; delinquency (truancy), 1.

There were no arrests of boys for drunkenness until the age of 14 had been reached, when two were arrested. Two aged 15, ten aged 16 and ten aged 17.

Girls Before Court.

In all, 110 girls were handled by the court officers during the year, 64 in court and 46 out of court, as follows: Incontinency, 25; malicious mischief, 28; visiting schools and pool rooms, 25; truancy, 20; truancy, 33; petit larceny, 155; assault and battery, 4; growing up in idleness, 1; crime, 17; smoking, 4; fighting, 10; dependent and neglected, 21; immoral conduct, 22; violating curfew ordinance, 3; violating bicycle ordinance, 20; abusive language, 3; delinquency (truancy), 1.

Cases settled out of court by probation officers during the year, 45 of which were boys and 46 girls, ranging from 7 to 15 years in each instance. Nineteen dependent and neglected children under 7 years of age were cared for by the probation officers.

Twenty-seven boys and fifteen girls were committed to the state industrial school at Ogden during the year, 100 boys and ten girls were placed on probation, thirty-eight boys were sent to the detention home, two boys and one girl were dismissed in court because of the insolvency of the agency of the state industrial school, and three girls were dismissed after a lecture by the court, three boys and two girls were placed under suspended sentence, the cases of twenty boys and ten girls were continued, fifteen boys and twenty-three girls were placed in care of the juvenile court charged with contributing to the delinquency of minors.
